

“Why Telecommuting Contract Services instead of Employee?”

After 20 years (first half of Engineering career) of developing many different technical solutions for just a few clients and customers of my employers, I discovered that I was better able to provide engineering services of countless different types to numerous other clients in many other markets by becoming an Independent Contract Engineer. Modern communication technologies enable being remote (not on-site) while being completely connected with other (temporary) team members, working literally as a virtual, albeit short-term, employee, on just one project needing some additional assistance at that time.

After more than 20 years doing business as GUSTECH, I have worked on over 100 different projects for over 37 different clients and customers; and, I have only actually met, in person, two of them. This proves that one does NOT need to be an employee to be able to create new technical solutions for the broad spectrum of those in need. By performing Telecommuting services, I am also able to work on more than one project at a time, often having 2 to 3 projects going simultaneously in different overlapping phases of development, as needs dictate.